

Retiree Individual Health Insurance Solutions: Simplifying the Transition to Individual Coverage

Overview

Retiree Individual Health Insurance Solutions help employers smoothly transition retirees from group-based benefits to individual health coverage options, including Medicare and private individual market. These solutions are typically used by employers that no longer wish to sponsor retiree group plans but still want to support their former employees. This approach helps retirees navigate a complex and often unfamiliar landscape, while still receiving coverage that first their evolving healthcare needs.

Why it Matters

Many organizations are phasing out traditional retiree group coverage due to rising costs and administrative complexity. However, simply cutting off support can leave retirees overwhelmed and confused. By offering a structured transition to individual coverage, employers can help retirees secure appropriate, affordable plans while also reducing their own financial liability and administrative burden. These solutions improve retiree experience, ensure continuity of care, and allow organizations to manage benefit programs more strategically and sustainably.

How it Works

1. Program Decision and Strategy: Helps employers evaluate current offerings and design a tailored retiree transition plan.
2. Change Management and Communications: Retirees are guided through the change with transparent, easy to understand communication.
3. One-on-One Licensed Benefits Guidance: Individual support ensures retirees understand their options and select the right plan.
4. Enrollment Support: Streamlined tools and advisor support help retirees enroll with confidence.
5. Ongoing Customer Service: Retirees receive continued help with claims, renewals and life changes.
6. Reporting and Insights: Employers receive data on retiree outcomes and engagement.

Top Features and Capabilities
