Guy Opperman, former UK Pensions Minister and now Strategic Adviser at Aptia Group, joins Asset TV to explore the future of pensions in the UK. Drawing on his experience shaping policy in government and working across both defined benefit (DB) and defined contribution (DC) systems, he shares his perspective on how the market is evolving.

In this discussion, he covers the growing role of DB consolidators, increasing competition for insurers, the challenges facing DC maturity, and the broader policy and investment landscape—including technology, AI, and the push to unlock pension capital for UK growth.
